

Culture, Social Support & Quality of Life:
Asian American Breast Cancer Survivors

University of California Los Angeles Research Study Call for Participants

- Help us understand the experience of breast cancer survivors
- Receive a token of our appreciation worth $90

Breast cancer is the number one site of cancer for Asian American women, yet we know very little about the experience of these women. Therefore, we would like to invite Chinese, Japanese, and Vietnamese women who have had breast cancer and are able to read and write English, Chinese (Cantonese or Mandarin), or Vietnamese to participate in a study to help us understand the experiences of Chinese-, Japanese-, and Vietnamese-American women with breast cancer.

The study is being conducted in partnership with Herald Cancer Association, San Francisco Chinatown Public Health Center, Asian American Health Coalition, Dr. Marjorie Kagawa-Singer, PhD at the University of California, Los Angeles and Dr. Qian Lu at the University of Houston. This study is supported by funding from the National Cancer Institute.

Participation will involve:

- An in-person one-on-one interview or focus group
- Completing questionnaires about your physical and emotional health
- Providing us feedback and suggestions about the research study
